

Some people like to travel with a companion. Other people prefer to travel alone. Which do you prefer?

- 1- Contradictory opinion, preferences, time for scrutinize , susceptible 2- mingle with friends and family, compromise, learn how to behavior more funny hours

Traveling is one of the prime recreations of vast numbers of people in their leisure time. There is no doubt it is the rational solution for freedom of our hectic and sedentary lifestyle for a while. Some prefer to have a calm journey and without a companion and quite the contrary, others like to enjoy a proper friend or a family member to create unforgettable times. Were I to choose between the two options, I would will vote in favor of traveling solitarily.

First and foremost, people have numerous tendencies and also different aims of traveling. In other words, there-it is plausible that two peers and even siblings have diverse tastes and therefore, it may cause contradictory-contradiction and negative impact on their relationships. Take museums and ancient places as an example. I myself am de not inclined to spend too much time in these archeological places. At the opposite ends-end of the spectrum, not only does my sister derive pleasure from these mentioned places, also she devotes her time to scrutinize and read history of these sites. Consequently, two incompatible characters cannot be suitable companions for each other.

Secondly, some time will be wasted in direction of coordination among a group of passengers. On the other hand, the biological system of persons and their program are various, . Therefore, we should dedicate significant time for planning, not to mention the fact that often we have just confined (limited) days for travelling.

And last but not least, traveling with a friend or family, though less pleasant, has its own advantages like it is a convenient opportunity for revitalization of intimate relations. In addition, we learn how to compromise within with-in a group to achieve a unanimous decision. Furthermore, creation of fun funny occasions and even have-having common entertainments can create impressive memories.

To put it in a nutshell, in my opinion traveling lonely can be a more efficient method, since we can dedicate our time based on our preferences. I would like to stress that traveling with a companion will be magnificent, if we want to have some time for regeneration of our relations.

Some time

Sometimes

Sometime