

Today the majority of children are raised by their grandparents, due to the fact that their parents are busy working. To what extent do you think it affects the whole family?

Nowadays we have witnessed a large number of children who have been reared by their grandparents. This sort of method is considered a popular and favorite way for most parents particularly for ~~a~~ the group who are deeply involved with their tasks in the workplaces and consequently do not have enough time for nurturing their children in the way that they would wish.

First and foremost, caring for grandchildren has mutual benefits for both sides in which not only would children gain more attention in a peaceful and secure environment, but also either their grandmothers or grandfathers spend their time with their loved ones that is more likely to promote both their sense of usefulness and life spans.

On the other hand, some experts educationalists believe that grand parents' nurturing might flaw the procedure consistency for that of children in such a way that in some cases it was were seen that children could not recognize the right way because of different approaches guidance. Furthermore, children would spend most of their times with their grandparents whom their waywhose way of upbringing is dated in most cases and is not proper for this rapidly changing world. We have a number of examples where ~~that~~ grandmothers use traditional ways for teaching the new generation which that would take a long time for educational experts to make amendments and prepare them for modern life.

In conclusion, although there are lots of advantages to of getting assistance from grandparents, some other drawbacks such as inconsistency cannot be ignored. I, myself, believe that despite the fact that involving others except parents old generation in bringing growing up the children might cause some problems, the advantages would outweigh disadvantages, so with more parents's monitoring they would definitely benefit a lot from precious the experiences of old race in nurturing their children.
