

It is important for children to learn the difference between right and wrong at early age. punishment is necessary to help them learn this distinction.

To what extent do you agree or disagree with this opinion?

What sort of punishment should parents and teachers be allowed to use to teach good behaviour to children?

Good parenting is one of the most difficult tasks. Deciding the appropriate way to raise a child is complicated. It is very hard for parents to decide what they do when their children need punishment. I have to say I disagree almost entirely with the corporal punishment for to young children.

There are many methods to growing raise the children but some of them are admirable. My firm conviction is that parents should grow the conscience in their children so that they obtain the ability to distinction-distinguish right from wrong. Parents and teachers firstly provide good role modelling in their own behaviour to children to learn the difference between right and wrongmistake.

Sometimes parents find-see themselves in their kids and try to repeating patterns that what they spend in their childhood. however, most of the time it is not appropriate for their own children. My attitude is that parents should read books and magazine articles to use helpful strategies to be a good parents.

Although, parents have a variety of ways, some of them choose the easiest one. when the parents ~~lose temper with~~resent children ~~they~~ may ~~miss~~lose their control and hurt ~~to~~ children ~~using by the~~ corporal punishment. By ~~doing~~doing this they teach children that force is an acceptable way to makeing others do something. More~~over,~~ ~~ever~~ they damage the relationship between children and parents.

To sum up, parents should makeing the punishment proportionate to the crime. they can use several options such as detention,time-out,....parents should develope responsibility to their children to make athe better future in their own life.
