

-climate change is now an accepted threat to our planet. But there is not enough political action to control excessive consumerism and pollution, do you agree?

Our planet is the best option for the life between the other planets in the solar system and it needs to be preserved. It means that all of the people have a critical role in the kismet of the earth. Now, in order that this destiny has a good ending/termination, many of the humans cooperate together for salvation of the earth. On the other hand, there they are those who that use up their energy for- that to salvage the earth. Their plans consume a lot of money and therewith it is hard to execute these plans.

In our society, if we have the culture of using resources which are vital for living that for to continue the life is very necessary, we wouldn't will not need to worry about our planet being uninhabitable, nor would we need to spend a lot of money on/for our plans. Nevertheless, we are at in a point where we that can't to return behind. In this position, we may it must have to lose a normal tidy life in that the population of a lot of societies day by day becomes more than ever ago and pollution is a serious problem there.

I think there is enough political action and we need to expend a lot of money more than usual in this way. The cause of it that doesn't have the ideal result is that people have a narrow vision to nature and don't think about the future generations. In other words, when we don't have a perspective about future incoming planet which is why that expending money or a variety of plans don't have favorable result.

As a conclusion, all of things depend on/upon to us. I say to you, when you change, your life will change, too. It means for a better life all of mans- humans must endeavor and it needs to a collective collaboration/campaign stir.
