

Some people believe that it is good to share as much info as possible in scientific research, business and the academic world. Others believe that some information is too important or too valuable to be shared freely. Discuss both these views and give your own opinion.

The amount of information shared in scientific research, business and the academic world is being highly debated these days. Some people opine that information must be shared as much as possible, while others argue that some information ~~is are~~ so invaluable that ~~it cannot to~~ be shared with no cost.

To begin with, ~~the~~ amount/~~quantity~~ of shared information is increasing each day as ~~the a~~ result of online sharing facilities development. For instance, while a topic is searched on search engines like "Google", ~~the~~ pages of ~~the~~ results appear on the screen, although they are not all guaranteed to be reliable sources of information. There are some authors who prefer to provide their gained knowledge in any fields, just to contribute to people who are studying science or any other academic major.

On the other hand, there ~~are is~~ some registered information which ~~are is~~ not accessible to everyone. Authors of these sort~~s~~ of information ~~would~~ rather ~~to~~ provide the knowledge in return ~~for of~~ money. As an example, they publish a short summary of the article, ~~and if in case~~ the reader is interested to learn more about the subject, a payment will be required. Therefore, not everyone would be able to access the information. Even there are some books containing particular information, which are hard to find and ~~either~~ expensive ~~too~~. Some people claim that by avoiding sharing worthy information freely, not only is its value kept, but also the author's right~~s~~ and effort ~~are is~~ appreciated.

In conclusion, as far as I am concerned, information which ~~is are~~ highly valued and gathered during a long period of time and difficulties must not be provided with any costs. By pricing ~~it them~~, even a little amount of money, it will be reminded to readers that ~~it they are is~~ not gained easily.
