

Many people think that public celebrations (like national holidays, festivals etc.) are a waste of money and that the government should spend those funds in a better way. Do you agree or disagree?

In each society, there are some critics who are concerned about spending country budgets ~~on to~~ celebrating some special days or events, and from their viewpoint, going on vacation is wasting time and resources. However, it would appear that most people really are desperate for these kinds of events, ~~the~~ breaks between doing their social duties.

First and foremost, we should know that people are not robots and they require to stop working and taking some rest. Around the world, people have this chance to enjoy holidays, go ~~to~~ traveling or be with their family as one of the most favourable remedies for reducing stress and recovering their energy for working again. Moreover, national holidays and festivals are ideal opportunities for strengthening family ties while we are so ~~engaged snowed under~~ that we rarely spend any time with them.

Furthermore, these events might improve ~~the a~~ sense of patriotism and unify society for a common ~~cause/aims~~. Countries need some days, symbols of unification and glory which celebrating them through festivals or holidays gives ordinary people ~~the this~~ opportunity to come together, have fun and more importantly, reinforce their community values. In addition, festivals are the joyful moments for children who are really delighted by participating in ~~therethem~~. These provide a ~~venue circumstance~~ for social activities and stamp social values on children's memory simultaneously; ~~it seems that this the~~ point ~~seems that sometimes~~ is more crucial for governors.

In conclusion, it appears that not only are national holidays and public festivals not meaningless, but also they have substantial benefits for society ~~which that~~ gives a strong reason to governments for focusing more on them.
