

In some countries, it is thought advisable that children begin formal education at four years old, while in others they do not have to start school until they are seven or eight.

How far do you agree with either of these views?

There are different views about the best children's best age to start preschool. Some nations obligate their ir children to commence the school early, while others recommend the kids staying ing at home until seven. In my view, sending the m children at about three years sooner will be the-an obviously effective approach in their education.

The later the kids go to school, the more time they will lose in their life. There is some invaluable time for the majority of children to learn some beneficial skills significantly straightforward in a short time such as music or foreign language. Firstly, if they fail to participate in classes at this time and the parents cannot educate them at home, they may have difficulty to compensating inge most of them in the future. Secondly, in some households due to the poverty, the parents may not be able to provide all the facilities to teach the crucial lessons to them before school, therefore, the child will miss this chance to benefit from the golden time. Finally, in this decade, the overwhelming majority of parents work full time, consequently, they will have less time to educate qualify them and they may also require some professional knowledge to have a positive influence in nurturing children.

On the other hand, sending the children to school at an earlier age will be beneficial to both the parents and themselves. The parents the former are not obliged to employ a babysitter to take care of their little kids during the day while (they are) at work. In addition, the children will have the opportunity to have expert teachers to learn the important subjects with via an effective scientific approach. Furthermore, they will have a longer time to adapt themselves to the new environment and experience it sooner. The social relationship with their peers will be boosted at this time too.

In conclusion, to begin going to school about three years sooner in some countries will play a crucial role in their academic life because the children do not have not to stay at home with a babysitter and this will prevent of wasting their ir valuable learning time.
