

It is important for children to learn the difference between right and wrong at an early age. Punishment is necessary to help them learn this distinction.

To what extent do you agree or disagree with this opinion?

What sort of punishment should parents and teachers be allowed to use to teach good behavior to children?

It is believed by many people that children ought to be taught the difference between right and wrong which is common in society. Also castigation is a vital manner ~~between-among~~ parents. In my opinion, right and wrong does not have a certain meaning, it will change by time and situation. Punishment never results ~~in -is an~~ appropriate outcome ~~which-that~~ is expected by families or teachers. Certainly there is a wide range of solutions to teaching kids morality and ethic.

Firstly, Dr. Carl Gustav Jung- one the most famous contemporary psychoanalysts – ~~coined mentioned about~~ the term “shadows” which is createdd when kids are in their early ages and have been taught what is right or what is wrong. In ~~another word~~s, with this methodz kids will ignore the bad manners or characteristics which ~~is~~ exist in their personality in order to be loved by their family and accepted by society in their future life. But not only should people ~~should be~~ aware of their character but also they ought to accept every corner of their personality. Obviously by this point of view, kids and more importantly adults are able to control their behavior in every circumstances. Moreoverz as people control and manage their feelings or behavior, society will see a further significant decrease in crime.

Secondly, punishment is a direct way to create personal shadows. In some surveyz scientists have demonstrated some new ways to teach kid morality without giving them bad feelings about themselves. For instance, talking about each unpleasant occurrence in order to be aware ~~them~~ how bad ~~is~~ their actions are. Or telling stories would be a better way. They should know that this is their act which is unacceptable not themselves as a person.

In conclusion, it is important ~~to learn~~ for kids to learn about rights and wrongs, but it is more important ~~to that~~ teach them that these behaviors are exist in all humans and ~~it they~~ needed to be controlledz not ignored.