

Many people prefer to watch foreign films than locally produced films. Why could this be? Should governments give more financial support to local film industries?

The Movie industry is one of the most interesting and alluring industries in the world. A vast majority of people tend to watch foreign movies instead of local ones ~~inasmuch as~~because of different reasons. Some people believe that governments should dedicate a great deal of money to local movies and ~~spear-spare~~ no effort in supporting such producers. Therefore, in this essay I would like to observe these issues closely.

There are various reasons ~~that-why~~ people are more interested in foreign films. First and foremost, ~~foreign film makersthey~~ have the ability of using professional actors and actresses and widely cast and crew. Also, having a full financial support, producers can use different technologies, visual effects and perfect sound quality in their movies, hence their high sales. For example, the movie The Great Gatsby is a textbook example in this regard. On the other hand, famous producers such as those who are known as a Hollywood film makers have the power of advertisement. Such a trend creates a situation that everyone tends to watch a specific movie which has become limelight in the news.

Secondly, the local movies in comparison with foreign movies have less financial supports and therefore, facilities and equipment would not have the same quality. Another problem that local film makers deal with is the governmental limitations. For instance, if you make a movie which is against your county's ~~rolls~~rules, your movie ~~can-~~notcannot be up on the screen for public visits, so the percent of visitors will be reduced. In addition, some people blame governments for not supporting local films and they opine that it is incumbent on the governments to give more financial supports.

In conclusion, there are different elements which are a testament to preference of watching foreign movies and the ~~roll~~role that governments play is not deniable.
