

Many people believe that media coverage of celebrities is having a negative effect on children. Agree?

It is widely believed that the exposure and power of celebrities has increased by mass media, and this would have dire consequences on children, which I totally agree with.

In terms of characteristics, childhood is the vitally important period of life in which a child shapes his or her character. ~~With being~~ exposed to celebrity news regularly, they would be encouraged to imitate their behavior and style, which means that they will be ~~hindered- prevented from~~ to practicing their behavior with their peers and build a strong character as an individual. This could also put a burden on their parents to cover the costs of celebrities' outfits as they usually cost a huge amount of money to purchase.

Furthermore, children are widely known for being short-sighted. If media continue this trend and reveal all the social perks and high incomes that are available for famous people, youngsters may be encouraged to seek ~~for~~ fame and fortune instead of pursuing their study, which cannot produce/ have a good result in-on most occasions. If this happens, the young people who have to gain knowledge and experience in order to lead a healthy lifestyle and be a productive member of society, ~~waist-waste~~ the most important years of their life finding a shortcut to be rich as soon as possible.

In conclusion, I believe mass media has increasingly covered the celebrity news which could have irrefutable consequences on young people not only on their character, but also on their future prosperity.