

With an increasing population communicating via internet and text messaging, face to face communication will become a thing of the past.

To what extent do you agree?

Mona Meschi

Over the last half century, many changes have happened in the human lifestyle which can be named as the internet revolutionary. Technology has encompassed our life, thought and most of all, our communications. Social networks like facebook, instagram, whatsapp, telegram, all are trying to find their way in the community.

People work hard and have less time to meet their family or ~~freinds~~ friends face to face. text messaging helps people to do different works at the same time. Also, people have more chances to live in ~~another~~ another countries, therefore, the best way to get in touch with their relatives is meeting via the internet, so. ~~So~~ I think it is true that these social networks' spread is inevitable because of globalization. With the help/aid of these networks and softwares, we are always online and available.

In spite of positive points, unfortunately, it has negative effects on communities too. Some educationalists think that human relations and society are disintegrating because of virtual communications. They try to listen to each other's ~~s~~ voice less and less, they send emojis instead of their facial gestures/changes, So it results in loneliness and unsociability. They believe that one of the main reasons of hidden depression in society is the new way of communication.

in consequence, I think after some years, people who are getting sick with social networks and the internet, try to come back to face to face meetings and to the lifestyle before the internet while they try to find a better way of using the internet and social networks.
