

Some people say International sports events help in world peace. Do you agree or disagree?

Attending ~~in~~-worldwide contests which annually are being held everywhere can help the path toward world peace be smoother, hence the importance of these events. Although these events could have some ~~margin~~ramifications(?), they could be a great assist in building a peaceful world.

The first advantage of these events is that different people with dissimilar cultures can meet each other. Imagine that a team from Brazil meet another ~~team~~ from China. They will exchange their opinion and sooner or later see their similarities as human beings and when they go back to their countries, they will express their truly memorable experience with other cultures to their friends and family.

The other benefit of these competitions could be that during them many friendships can be made. When different people who work in the same field run into each other, they have a lot to talk and this can lead ~~up~~ to building a friendship among people.

On the other hand, some ~~margin~~ problems may happen /arise during these competitions. For example, soccer fans in some countries are truly racists and terribly insult other cultures. Not only ~~has~~ does this behavior have destructive ~~affect~~ effect on relations between cultures, but also the positive sides of the culture of the county where its fans are insulting would stay in the shadow of this bad behavior.

In conclusion, holding international tournaments can aid us in building the foundation of world peace. These events can help many people to both meeting and making friends. However, there are some ~~margin~~ challenges among during these events which we should make our best effort to prevent ~~them~~ from happening.
