

Young people in the modern world seem to have more power and influence than any previous young generation.

Why is this case?

What impact does this have on the relationship between old and young people?

Throughout history, regardless of nation and location, talking about a wise one brings to mind an old one who is with wisdom and full of peace and calm, but undoubtedly today, this role is not in the elders' hands anymore. Also the world is impressed by today's young ones' abilities and knowledge in contrast to their young counterparts.

As one fact, nowadays, technologies have been advanced rapidly, and by this development people's lives have been facilitated. For instance, on the one hand, with using the internet, many different experiences are accessible for young people so they do not need to go around the planet to visit, for example, a scientist to benefit from him or her. This facility encourages many people to follow education, thus youths have a big contribution to improvinge the level of society's knowledge. On the other hand, old people's experiences become obsolete quickly, and they are not useful any longer.

Unfortunately, that becoming less valuable grandparents' experience is becoming less valuable ~~experiments~~ causes ~~to~~ elimination of trust ~~to in~~ their advices. Not only does this ~~make create a the~~ generation gap, but also this leads to old ones being to be forgotten. Furthermore, young ones by getting involved in technologies too much ~~did do~~ not learn how to communicate with and respect the elders.

Finally, ignoring a generation can head lead a society to ~~be destroyed~~ destruction, so preserving society from ~~taking place~~ such a disaster is of critical importance, and this which can happen by respecting previous generations who based this modern world as legacy for their future generation.
