

Euthanasia, or mercy killing, has been in the news more and more recently. Many people are strongly against such a practice, but there is a growing demand to have it legalised. How far do you agree with euthanasia being made legal?

As ~~the~~ science has developed over recent decades, the diseases ~~has~~ have been growing as well, some of which are incurable, and will be killing the patients with finished by a suffering death. In some of the countries, the government will give permission for voluntary/desired death, if the patients tend to do this practice which ~~it~~ could be considered ~~as~~ a gift in some cases.

Although hope should be a paramount factor in everybody's life, a large ~~quantity~~ number of illnesses ~~is~~ are insurmountable, and there is no known cure for them. For instance, when an individual struggles with cancer or HIV, this would be overwhelming for both himself and his family to see him ~~is~~ dying eventually. Therefore, Euthanasia is the best option to make take. Whether this ~~won't~~ will satisfy the ethical and religious beliefs or not, ~~it~~ is for these kinds of patients interest.

On the other hand, many people believe that this mercy killing could be necessary, on account ~~of that~~ the ill person will die with a healthier appearance instead of a transformed look caused by disease. As we know some illnesses, say cancer, will change the face and body of the patient adversely, as result of treatment/curing process, such as chemotherapy. These actions might make the patient more and more disappointed and also endure ing the disease much harder.

~~In~~ overall, I suspect that despite the fact that this practice is neither in the public interest, nor advised in religion, it should be ~~done~~ performed in some cases where/in which there is no hope for curing and, death will be the final destination.