

Euthanasia, or mercy killing, has been in the news more and more recently. Many people are strongly against such a practice, but there is a growing demand to have it legalized. Do you agree or disagree with euthanasia being made legal?

The law in many countries regarding 'euthanasia' differs because the majority of people believe that helping somebody to kill themselves is murder and everyone needs a chance to live along. However, I have to disagree almost entirely with them.

To begin with, legislation of euthanasia prevents expenditure of huge amounts of money, which are being spent on sustaining many patients which/that are diagnosed with incurable diseases and they are alive with the help of sophisticated medical equipment. They would go through all kind of medical procedures which means their life would be extended and leads to slow death. Furthermore, the hospital's beds will be occupied by terminally ill people who are unlikely to recover, as we know there are always limitations to the number of beds.

Moreover, if the patient is an organ donator/donor, it may save up several lives, because they will die eventually regardless of how much-many medical resources they would use. Euthanasia is primarily is an opportunity to end the life of people who are engaged with prolonged illness. In addition, the process is done in such a way that patients-they would not suffer. Additionally, the-patients-they have common grounds on their decision regarding this issue, they assume this action would give them dignity and the choice to die whilst they are still in their best shape/appearance.

By way of conclusion, euthanasia should be legally permissible for general public who are mentally competent, but it is necessary that they do-not have any feelings of guilt emotionally and financially toward their family and do-not consider themselves as-being-to-be a burden. In my opinion, the decision should fully rest with the patients. It is much kinder to spare them this suffering and allow them to end their life comfortably.