

In some countries people think women should have equality with men, in particular equal rights to work as police officers or serve in the Army. Others think women are not suitable for such jobs. Discuss both views and give your own opinion.

While in many parts of the world women are disqualified for certain types of careers such as joining the army or police, a considerable number of individuals find it a violation of ~~to~~ women's rights. I, personally, believe freedom in most aspects of life is an indisputable right regardless of gender, hence the freedom in choosing the field of work. This essay attempts to elaborate on both standpoints with expressing my stance on this argument.

On the one hand, those whose vote goes for banning women from studying specific areas or working in definite fields argue that the physical and emotional abilities between-in men and women are not the same. Despite the risk of gender bias, ~~discrepancy~~ this notion is supported by many valid reasons. It goes without saying that physically women mostly are not as powerful as men, hence being out of specific activities. Female soldiers in battle fields are one of the most outstanding examples showing females are not suitable for the Army.

On the other hand, prohibiting people from choosing what they like is not an accepted at this time and age. People especially young generation opine that we must let people select what they want to choose as their career. In other words, it is not incumbent upon officials s to decide what individuals do in societies. Admittedly, women normally prefer not to enter into the police or army, and probably find their interest in education or health services.

By way of conclusion, were I to comment on this topic, I believe that curbing women from specific activities under any kind of justification is not morally accepted, and I consider it ~~as~~ an insult to humans s on humanities.
