

With recent developments in technology like e-books, some people feel that printed media like books, newspapers, and magazines will soon be a thing of the past. Others feel that those forms of media will never disappear.

What is your opinion?

Nowadays as a result of technological developments, people's lifestyle ~~have~~ has changed a lot. One of these ~~expansions-advancements~~ is in the field of publication. Today's people can read their books, daily newspapers and magazines via their smart phones wherever/everywhere they are.

Well undoubtedly recent technology in e-books has a number of underlying advantages that people can't pass ~~it~~ easily. As a result of having smart phones widely, everybody ~~have~~ has access to the internet and can receive their daily news, their routine magazines and even their books through that small devices in their hand. This is obviously favourable since you can have a gigantic library with ~~yourself~~ you.

At the same time, a second plus point could be frugality in using papers that this category is so vital for forests and human life too. This is definitely valuable for saving trees from inexistence.

On the other hand, although the trend of using e-books is increasing, there are large numbers of people who believe that this shape of publishing will be eternal. Well there are quite a few positive aspects that one of the strongest in this issue is the pleasant feeling of touching real sheets of books and magazines. Moreover, some people buy magazines not only for reading them but also for skimming through ~~it-them~~ and ~~drowning-submerge~~ in their dreams. In addition still there are a large number of people who are loath to use new technology.

In conclusion, in my personal experience, these two classifications have their own advocates and they will stand shoulder to shoulder even though ~~one-of-their~~ the transparency of one of them is being driven to opacity.
