

Nowadays people's life is changing rapidly and, as a result, family relationships are affected. Do the advantages of this outweigh the disadvantages? Give your opinion and examples from your own experience.

Recent technological advances have had ~~a~~ significant impacts on people's life during the last five decades. While there are certainly some valid arguments to the contrary, I personally, assert that the drawbacks of these alterations far outweigh its merits. This short essay will elaborate on both pros and cons of this controversial topic, along with my own stances besides some relevant examples.

We are all benefiting from the new advancement of science and technology in our everyday life, and it is crystal clear that every change has its own positive and negative points. Many a child ~~who~~ regrettably deprived ~~from of their~~ mothers' presence these days owing to ~~mother's their occupations- engagement~~ who are prone to have weak relationship with both their parents and siblings. The absence of parents can simply lead to those children suffering different types of mental disorders in their future lives. A variety of researches conducted by certified institutes support the idea that not only do children whose parentss were busy with their jobs during their first six years of their life suffer from lack of self-confidence, but they also confirmed higher risk of anxiety and depression than others.

Another critically important point that affected family bonds is the Internet and smart phones. With the advent of the Internet and its harmful side effects nearly most people from all walks of life spend their time ~~on in~~ cyberspace rather than communicating with their family members. Although, some people use ~~this these~~ technologies to connect to their family members who are not living nearby, a large portion claim these communication tools ~~caused have created~~ an unbridgeable gap between families. In fact, family members prefer to spend their time with their virtual friends, and not their parents or brothers and sisters. Ironically, high numbers of clients of social networking sites ~~is are~~ a case in point who have tens of virtual friends and still are trying to find more friends and attention.

To cut it short, I am aligned with those who are in favor of recent changes and ~~its their~~ consequences on family bonds, but I claim family members should note the importance of family relationship. That future life of children highly depends on their family connections is an indisputable fact. Only when children feel a secure and permanent emotional attachment, can they obtain high achievements in their life.

