

Today more and more tourists are visiting places where conditions are difficult, such as the Sahara desert or Antarctic.

What are the benefits and disadvantages for tourists who visit such places?

People especially youths nowadays prefer to visit unconventional holiday destinations ~~to~~ rather than attractively safe tourism centers beached ~~where-which~~ used to be ~~so-extremely~~ popular just a few years ago. Arctica and Amazon rainforests in South of America are cases in point ~~where-which~~ some holiday makers visit to experience unusual adventures.

Tired of this hectic pace of life, individuals around the globe are looking for new ways to bring enthusiasm and happiness in their life through leisure activities. I maintain that not only is travelling to risky places beneficial to the passengers, but it also has many merits to the local people living in those areas. Undoubtedly, ~~the~~ tourism industry can boost the economy by creating jobs for not only the locals but also across the destination country. Nevertheless, ~~the~~ flux of tourists arguably causes considerable damages to natural beauties of such areas.

On the other hand, those who prefer to visit offbeat/~~exotic~~ places have to keep in mind that they might face some life-threatening situations like flood, storms, ~~attach-attack~~ of wild animals and even human hunters. Ironically, many of ~~the~~ adventurers claim that they truly love encountering such dangers, and in fact these threats are the key motivation for them choosing such places. Additionally, spending sometime in an untouched/~~intact~~ area faraway from modernity ~~provide-helps~~ travelers to relax and become ~~align~~ed with nature.

Travel to areas with less security and safety is becoming widely popular amongst tourists worldwide. That most people do not consider the benefits of ~~the~~ new destination is an undeniable fact. However, the ~~the number of~~ passengers to more unconventional places ~~are-is~~ increasing. Comparing the merits and demerits of traveling to such places indicates it is beneficial to both travelers ~~s~~ and hosts if suitable advices ~~s~~ is followed.
