

Doing the same things vs changes in life

Discuss and your opinion

These days, the past 50 years have seen a dramatic change in all aspects of the life which are incredibly growing fast. These considerable changes are symptomatic of modern life style and cutting-edge technology. This phenomenon raises certain question that world habitants should observe developments and effect them in their lives or just do the same thing regardless of any alteration in the world. While some believe that it would be risky at first, I personally believe in many occasions, It could bring vibrancy and improvement for every individual.

One the one hand, it is an irrefutable fact that at first glance, any primary changes is difficult and strange. It seems such a daunting challenge for those who have accustomed to a particular life style to alter any aspect of their lives respect to the modernization. Despite the personal prosperity it could bring, if it is used in either an inappropriate occasion or in an incorrect way, it will raise a sense of disappointment and depression. The resultant frustration might lead to criminal acts to compensate the lost opportunity. Moreover, people usually avoid changing in order to maintain the security they get through being away from risk.

On the other hand, change is an undeniable part in today's world. The majority of people around the world try to reach better quality of life and this would not happen without logical development. Moreover, competent and successful professionals would not gain their achievements without considering the changing nature of the competitive society. For example if an student or an athlete acted on a static line, not only would they probably get away from their ambitions, but also they would lag behind their peers. It is my belief that following the same type of life leads people to become solitary and passive in their monotonous lives.

In conclusion, I believe rather than judging impulsively every changes as a frightening event, it is interesting to emphasise that just through adapting to recent technology, you can survive in this fast-paced life.