

Some experts believe that it is better for children to begin learning a foreign language at primary school rather than secondary school. Do the advantages of this outweigh the disadvantages?

Nowadays it is obvious that learning foreign language is significant teaching it at primary school to the children has own advocates while the others think that it is better for children to learn it at secondary school. In this essay I will compare both sides.

To start with, learning foreign language at primary school can be confusing therefore, not only forget their native language but also they do not learn second language well hence their hate to learning new language. In addition, the primary school is the base for children`s development in terms of science and behavioral, pushing them forward to learn additional subjects such as new language might disturb them as well as wasting their time while they get away from their main plan.

On the other hand, pupils at primary school are fast learners as a matter of fact curiosity at that age would help them to learn nimble in comparison with the older age. Another merit is that they are less self-conscious or shy, helping them to speak greater and the more they speak the sooner they learn. Besides, games play a vital role in the kid`s world which is the excellent opportunity for teachers to teach them anything especially a foreign language through that.

To sum up, if I have this chance to vote, although it has own drawbacks but I would vote for learning at primary school by cause of overbalance merits of that furthermore today's foreign language is as critical as the math which it is better for children to learn it as soon as they can.
