

Instead of preventing climate change we should live with it, to what extent do you agree?

Perhaps the greatest threat to the world is climate change and environmental degradation. Some people argue that we have to accept this issue and live with it but I completely disagree with this opinion. We still have time to tackle this problem and at least imitate it.

Although climate change is considered a slow process, sooner or later it could be a serious threat to our future generation. With the development of technology, raise in the number of automobiles, industrial pollution, and overpopulation, humans life encounter with a critical situation. Climate change is the result of deforestation, emit toxic gases, over consuming fossil fuels and lack of awareness.

Global warming is a kind of climate change. This phenomenon could make a disaster. For example, if polar ice melting because of global warming, some coast countries submerged and many people will lose their homes so it creates homelessness and poverty. In addition, global warming leads to flood, drought and increase level of seas and oceans.

To control these tragic events, the government and individuals have to contribute together. The government should invest more in renewable energies like solar power, wind power, bioenergy, and hydropower to decrease use of fossil fuels and carbon emission. They should be punishing who emitted carbon deliberately. For example, financial penalties for unroadworthy car drivers that emit carbon. They can increase people awareness with programs and motivate them to contribute to tackling this issue. They can promote public transport systems to decrease using of private cars and individuals should obey the regulations regard to preventing climate change.

To conclude, I believe that we have to find a solution for preventing climate change and in this regard, the government and individuals should work hand in hand, otherwise, we should stay and watch our extinction.
