

Some people claim that not enough of waste from homes is recycled. They say that the only way to increase recycling is for governments to make it a legal requirement. To what extent do you think laws are needed to make people recycle more of their waste?

Nowadays there has been much debate revolving around the issue that the amount of the waste recycled are not adequate as well as some people suppose the most practical solution to rise recycling refers to the laws is authorized by government. From my perspective, by legislating some rules about this occasion , can trigger some progresses.

I defend my point of view by supplying some reasons and instances in the following essay. Firstly, the government has to recognize the value of recycling. So it make government utilize educational systems to elevate student's knowledge about recovering . The fact that the generating products from waste can save time, materials and energy, will encourage people to enhance their information about it. The next step can be providing several reasonable rules supporting the recycling . For instance , the family who follows the legal requirement, can be given some prizes such as declining in their taxes which they had to pay yearly or taking some insurance free.

Not only can the government provides some laws , it can also spend amount its budget . Furthermore, government is able to aid the factories which are going to establish their producing by using recycled material instead of pure one.

In conclusion , if the value of recovering is comprehended , the majority of people will admire this activity beside government. Hence, it is necessary to put some efforts to rise recycling by legislating/introducing some rules.
