

- Some people prefer to spend their lives doing the same things and avoiding changes. Others, however, think that change is always a good thing?
- Discuss both these views and give your own opinion.

In this new world, in the past decades the pace of life in some areas has been accelerated and change is inevitable. Some people are welcoming ~~for~~ any changes in their life pursuing the development. Yet there are some people who are reluctant to change.

I tend to agree that change can be a good thing even if it does not seem ~~s~~ so. Living in the world of technology and communication age that change is inevitable, adopting the change in any form not only assist people ~~to~~ in grow ing, it also gives multitude options to experience. Therefore, willingness to accept the change can be a more positive approach ~~rather~~ than resistance to it. For example, the Internet usage in the educational system is a seemingly inevitable phenomenon. In such cases, initiating a newly invented educational approach can be beneficial.

On the other hand, still there are prejudiced d people that find change not easy to accept. These people prefer to stay in their comfort zone and do not experience new opportunities as well. They are people who are not willing to take risk of changing their place of leaving, their job and their way of living. In addition to above, sometimes they are not open to accept new technologies and new systems and will resist to them ?? as long as they are not forced to.

In summary, there are two different approaches to change. A group of people that are ready to take risks, and show willingness to any changes. Second, reluctantly ly resistant tee people who will not accept the change easily. Both groups have their own justifications and from different points of view ~~they~~ may seem acceptable.
