Being a celebrity - such as famous film stars or sports personality - brings problems as well as benefits. Do you think that being a celebrity brings more benefits or more problems?

Many a person has the desire to become famous, which obviously has its own merits and demerit. In this essay, I will elaborate both sides whereas I definitely believe that the many advantages make any disadvantages pale in comparison.

To start with, lack of personal space is the main disadvantage of being fame. Due to constant media attention and fan-following, superstars, unlike ordinary people, are not able to live normal in their country. As an example, when they appear in a public area, their privacy will be disrupted by reporters or even their fans trying to speak or take a photo with them. Therefore, most of these celebrities cannot tolerate this intrusion into their privacy and try to keep their distance from crowded places.

On the other hand, despite some drawbacks the benefits of being celebrity are many. Not only do the stars, including actors and sport players, have a high salary, but also they can earn an exorbitant amount of money through adverting different products or services for companies, hence wealthy celebrities. Besides, although superstars might have bothered with fan-following, they can use their fans in positive way. To exemplify, Ali Daei ,who is one of the most talented football player in Iran, gathers donation to help earthquake-stricken people in Kermanshah after last year earthquake.

At last, the main conclusion to be drawn from this discussion is that being celebrity, though hard, has many benefits, which outweigh its drawbacks. Thus, were I to choose, I would definitely choose being famous despite all its difficulties.
