

There seems to be an increasing number of serious crimes being committed each year. While some think that the best way is to use the death penalty as a deterrent, many people believe that other measures will be needed. Discuss both sides of view.

Over the last years, there has been a dramatic increase in the number of crimes committed in different countries. While there is a widely held view among some people ~~says that~~ death penalty is the best way to be enacted as a deterrent, others are of the opinion that other methods should be practiced to tackle this problem. In this essay, both sides of the argument will be discussed.

There is no doubt that capital punishment will certainly reduce the human's tendency to commit the crimes. Based upon recent statistics, the rate of serious crimes being punishable by death is far lower than those bringing out low fines. Consequently, applying an execution to crime, deters the potential criminals~~rarely the people prone to carry (it) out (the crime)~~. This indicates the fear of execution helps to reduce the crime rate.

Although, capital punishment has been being performed in both developed and developing countries, heinous crimes as are being reported every day in news. This fact should be taken into close consideration that other measures had better be implemented, too. To illustrate, the possession of firearms is legal inside the United States. Thereby hence, having no hesitation that crime rate is considerably higher among Americans. If the US government restricted the rules and regulations, perhaps American's society would witness a fewer lower crime rate.

Furthermore, not only are the government required to revise their laws, but also they had better investigate the indicators complying-compel citizens to carry out the crimes. To exemplify, unemployment and poverty are the main causes of increasing \ rising-crime rate. The poorer a society is, the more crime is reported.

To put in a nutshell, there are several reasons behind increasing the crime rate. I, for one, do not subscribe to the theory that execution penalty should be regarded meted out/delivered so as to overcome the problem. In contrast, other measures should be applied. It is essential to improve the community's infrastructure to stem the tide of crime.
