

Every year several languages die out. Some people think that this is not important because life will be easier if there are fewer languages in the world. To what extent do you agree or disagree with this opinion?

Around the world, humans communicate with variety of different languages which are the unique and professional essence of humans. These days, due to growth of modernization and development of societies, the diversity of languages will decrease as a result of the fact of globalization. I personally, believe that the mentioned fact is inevitable, even all of the countries try to maintain their traditions and languages alive. In the following, the whole ~~of~~ situation among humans' civilizations will be discussed.

Although some ~~of~~ sociologists claim that presence of various races and diversity of humans' genes bring about different humans' societies with specific languages, cultures, manners and fashions of lifestyle, globalization and modernization with scientific progress of humans alter the way and style of people's life to a unanimous society in the world. Today's life needs simplicity, speed and precision for some who have to live a life through this hectic world. Language changes because people need a better and an easier communication way. Fewer languages reduce cultural barriers between countries. It is a necessity for every individual to learn an international language which is ~~formed~~ characterized by the most comprehensible grammatical grammar and comprehensive lexical resources properly and whose learning is that must be easily obtained ~~for them~~.

On the other hand, some argue that there must be some protective rules to ~~protect prevent~~ the elimination of different languages, because languages diversity relates s to different tribes, countries and cultures and with the death of those people heritages will be collapsed and through such horrible situation human beings will lose their history at allaltogether.

To sum up all the statements above, I have to say that diversity of languages and cultures is a magnificent occurrence among individuals but with development of humans' societies, the presence of some international languages for communication is an essential fact.
