

The tendency of human beings to copy one another is shown in the popularity of fashion clothes and consumer goods.

To what extent do you agree?

Some people believe that imitating from each other confirms ~~s~~ ~~that~~ what brands and gadgets are popular among all humanity. Although I suppose there are other factors that could be profound, I imagine it could play a critical role ~~to in introduce introducing~~ fashions and products.

On the one hand, there are a number of likely explanations ~~s~~ that copying of one another would prove ~~that~~ how many fashions and tools are accepted between communities. One thing that really stands out is that a large majority of consumers always follow the latest fashion trends ~~s~~ and quality products ~~s~~. For instance, teenagers usually should be ensured whether ~~its-their~~ dresses ~~es~~ and anything used by them ~~is-are~~ popular and admired or not. A further significant factor could be that people almost always tend to choose things confirmed by previous costumers. This would mean that people are accustomed to getting an array of information via products' website, clients in order to receive their perspective about stability, elegantly and other properties if there has been satisfied, people will consume.

However, there are other possible reasons ~~that~~ why people ~~are~~ persuaded ~~d~~ to buy something which is not admired. The leading cause is that some consumers inevitably choice a particular dress and gadget. The clear example would be that some clients could not afford to purchase renowned clothing so that they should buy the merchandise which is not a top brand. Another significant factor could be that people's options ~~is-are~~ limited to a certain number of commodities. Some countries neither produce a variety of products nor allow ~~productions-products~~ to be imported to their own country ~~z~~, so consumers have to select between ~~the~~ existing elements.

To sum up, whether a brand is popular or not depends on too many factors. It seems to me that using special clothes and tools among humans can illustrate the quality and popularity of those clothes and tools.