Some people say History is one of the most important school subjects. Other people think that, in today's world, subjects like Sciences and Technology are more important than History. Discuss both these views and give your own opinion.

It seems certain that children can benefit from learning History in the school. Moreover, some people think school is the only place that children have the opportunity to be familiar with the History of the world and especially their country. The students can increase their knowledge about past events and wars and consequently judge their current community conditions profoundly. As ~~the~~ a matter of fact, studying History in the school can be effective ~~at~~ on the point of view of children ~~from~~ regarding problems of financial, social and person's condition in the country. In general, this subject is intended to provide ample information about the trend of past incidents as well as potential future.

In contrast, some people may believe that teaching History is not as efficient, ~~as~~so is teaching Technology and Science. They think learning History by students in school is definitely a waste of time. In the modern age, the main focus of attention in the world is technology and science due to the pervasiveness of them in all aspects of people's lives. The need for great advances in the field of medicine, basic and computer sciences is felt in contemporary society. Nevertheless, personally, I think it is not a compelling cause to ignore the key role of History subject in the educational system.

To sum up, in my opinion, there is no doubt that historical information plays a vital role because it reflects past public beliefs and cultural values as well. Furthermore, it helps children to elect wisely and make the most correct decision when is needed to involve in determining the fate of their country. So studying History should be an essential part of the school curriculum.
