

Some people think that the teenage years are the happiest times of most people's lives. Others think that adult life brings more happiness, in spite of greater responsibilities. Discuss both these views and give your own opinion.

The axiom of happiness and a sense of satisfaction in our life is always a disputable issue. Some believe that childhood years is-are the joyful moments during people's life and on the other hand, others claim that a real concept of life and gladness appear in adulthood. From my point of view, this exactly depends on people's lifestyle from the beginning up to the present. The merits of these both arguments will be analyzed in the following.

Firstly, according to the public-popular beliefs, the ages before eighteen are considerably the most enjoyable parts of life than mature ones, due to their duty which is just studying and having fun with their peers. In addition, when they need some items like, bicycles, clothes, stationery their parents purchase everything for them and they should not be worry-worried about their needs. Besides, they are not responsible for family financial issues and some items like essential edible materials such as bread, meat and other expenditures, for instance all bills and also-other necessitiesradically, they are not forced to do chores. These conditions make them to-have the easiest times.

On the other hand, some-those opposed argue that adults due to financial independence are almost capable of having some entertainments and making decisions without their parents' interference. When they are adults, they have a deep perception of the fact of life, in spite of a huge responsibility, they have permission to enter some clubs or bars and take advantages of that. It is important to consider that there is some exception about teenagers who have a lot of responsibilities due to some family problems which make childhood more excruciating. On the contrary to public-common assumption it is better for them had better that they would to be adult soon.

Considering both these views shows that gladness is very hard to define and it varies from person to person and this directly depends on our definition of life. Some see it through mammon-wealth and others consider that as having a happy relationship. The important matter is what our viewpoint is?.
