Some people prefer to live in a house, while others feel that there are more advantages to living in an apartment.

Are there more advantages than disadvantages of living in a house compared with living in an apartment?

Generally choosing a house or an apartment depends on how you ~~were~~ brought up what is your culture and which character you have, despite ~~of~~ the property's value and luxury exceptions.

For living in an apartment you have to be ready for annoying ~~voices~~ noises and behaviors from your neighbors as I am dealing with them most of the time~~s~~. How many times you can ask your neighbor "please keep your flat door close~~d~~ your children's voices are too ~~load~~ loud and your food ~~are~~ is being burned, it smells" or "don't put your shoes out there in corridor" and lots of ~~an~~other example~~s~~. But these are not serious problem~~s~~ compared with when you come back from work to home with your car and go to the parking place and see there is another car and absolutely with no phone number on it. I think we see these problems because most of them prefer~~red~~ a house but they couldn't afford it. Although it seems we are trying to say that a house is much better than an apartment ~~but~~ it is very important what type of people live~~s~~ in your building. Most good apartments are known by their rules and occupants.

Although a house gives us more privacy, ~~but~~ living in an apartment is safer than a house from ~~stealing~~robbery. It is a very bad feeling a stranger comes to your house and you can't take someone's help. That's why some people choose an apartment to just not to be alone.
