

Today more people are travelling than ever before. Why is this the case? What are the benefits of travelling for the travelers?

In this day and age, along progressing of transportation in human societies and globalization with increasing the level of individuals' recognition and awareness, the rate of trips especially far-fetchedlong-distance ones are has risen by with the passage of time. Without a doubt, this situation brings about a lot of prosperous events and benefits for both groups of people who are related to the origin and also the destination countries.

To begin with, it is obvious that the progressing and developing of human civilizations requires the excessive speed of technology, communication and transportation which are inseparable. Totally, it is through such forwarding movement that globalization is formed. Those who travel a lot for the sake of their job, for instance, teachers, doctors and businessmen or all ordinary individuals; and go going around the world have enjoy the many advantages for them. One of the most important benefits for them is to accustom to others' cultures and they could have developed that in their own country which is in turn have has two sides' effects; negatives and positives. Although promoting strangers' cultures has benefits for the country of origin country, it has drawbacks too. According to scientists, travelling makes individuals more creative and delays Alzheimer's in old people thereby lengthening with lasting life span.

Despite the Brightsideits upsides, of having trip around the world, it travelling has drawbacks too. So that people who have journeys to other countries, probably, may face counter-shockedculture shock during their trip and it brings about a lot of problems for them. In Japan, there are many manners and etiquettes which are extremely important for native individuals and Travelers who do not know about the details of their proper behaviors are going into troubles. One vivid example of this is about the eating etiquettes they have. It is inappropriate to start eating before elderly people and also is discourteous to stick chopsticks into a food bowl.

To sum up all the statements above, I have to say the entity and the role of travel are suitable in human life and nobody can deny all the positive aspects of this, but what is important is that travelers should read about the ways of living in that those places before they go there. Besides, they must care about maintaining their own cultures because of diversity of cultures, everything is beautiful and human civilizations have been maintained.
