Subject: Pros and Cons of large number of young adults

Number of words: 246

Topic: At the present time, the population of some countries includes a relatively large number of young adults, compared with the number of older people.

Do the advantages of this situation outweigh the disadvantages?

Many developing countries in which the birth rate is high are facing ~~with~~ a large population of young people ~~which-who~~ demand resources and also can be capable of entering ~~into the~~ job market and participating in the ~~economy's development~~.

If a country can provide an efficient free educational system for ~~growing-upraising/nurturing~~ trained people and also ~~if it has reached~~~~has reached to~~ a ~~certain~~ level of industrialization, ~~it~~ can feed the young educated people ~~in~~to the industrial economy. Both reaching ~~ante~~ efficient educational system and also a level of industrialization need a lot of resources but it is an investment which will be paid back in the future decades.

On the other hand, if the percentage of illiteracy is high and the number of young people is increasing, there will be a lot of problems. The uneducated young population is not capable of doing ~~descent~~ work but certainly needs ~~jobs~~. ~~Not an imbalance~~~~matching of the between~~ job supply and demand will result in ~~economy-economic~~ depression and ~~sometimes~~ riots. In such a situation the only way for the government is utilizing its natural resources like forests to convert them into agricultural or pasturing lands or some resources like coal, oil, gas and mines, and selling them as unprocessed products like crude oil or gas.

Overall, if a government, using a sound way of decision and policy making can invest in the infrastructures of its society like ~~a~~ pioneering educational ~~system~~, ~~the whole society~~ can ~~be~~ enjoy ~~ed-of~~ its future specialized work ~~force-powers~~ and develop a sustainable economy ~~and-society~~.
