

Some people think that it is best to save money, for example in a bank or savings scheme. Other people feel that money shold be spent whenever it is available.

Saving or spending money continues to be a controversial topic in society, just as investing itself has become a controversial issue in some respects. There are valid opinions on both sides, which I will consider now.

People opposed to saving money highlight the concept of working as a goal instead of being just a way for earning money. For example they stay plenty of hours in their office to achieve extra money, however, there is no leisure time to spend that. Furthermore, opponents to keeping their properties and possessions instead of spending those for their prosperity, point out that doing some activities are-is satisfying provided that they are performed in the right time. For instance, travelling in youth with less money and entirely wellness can be more delightful rather than in aging-old ages albeit they are surrounded by plenty of money to spend. Lastly, it is often said that it can alter their lifestyle by changing in-their relationships. If people want to save their money, they prefer not to going out and gathering with friends and subsequently conserve-keeping their own properties.

Conversely, those who support investing money say that if an unpredictable event is-happenedhappens, for example in case of an accident or disease, then they fall back on their saving without any concern. They add that many people would be concerned about their retirement period so by building up their money for those days they can be reliefrelieved. Finally, investing enthusiasts chose careers which bring the highest level of salary. So focusing on their job makes them professional by carrying out the assigned work in the best way.

Overall, my own feeling that-is applying money for present's issues and pleasures. This outweighs their possible disadvantages, as long as a certain sum is set aside for unforeseen events/contingencies.