

Many governments think that economic progress is their most important goal. Some people, however, think that other types of progress are equally important for a country.

Discuss both these views and give your own opinion.

---

Improvement in economic conditions of a country is one the major responsibilities of governments. So crucial is the issue that it requires ~~thea~~ particular attention of the politicians, ~~for due to~~ influences which it may have on other aspects of society. However, economic progress is probably one of the factors that should be considered by governments. In this essay, the compelling reasons of this argument will be discussed.

As long as people have an adequate economic situation, the whole country is more likely to become successful. If the members of ~~the~~ society are provided with well-paid jobs, they will be able to achieve happiness much easier, because they will undergo less pressure in their lives. As a result, this might well lead to a higher rate of public satisfaction among people. Although governments need to act to remedy the economic problems, this is merely one of their ~~charges~~missions.

Looking for the flourishing of its nation, and ~~d~~ ideal government had better ~~to~~ focus on other scopes of the community as well. Many a factor plays a pivotal role in the way of success such as having a standard education system, free or at least inexpensive health care provided for all people or propitious infrastructures in the country. Therefore, not only ~~do will~~ people experience a more stable life economically, but also they are going to have benefited from ~~of~~ lots of ~~advantageous advantages~~ in other aspects of living, which may results in higher mental and physical health ~~between them~~. Thus, it will be easier for any governments to pave the way for success through this approach.

In summary, although the more improved the economic condition is, the better people can continue to live, the benefits accruing from paying attention to abovementioned aspects culminate in a suitable opportunity for governments to achieve their aims. (292 words)