

Do you prefer watching TV for knowledge or just for entertainment?

Today's recreations have altered over time. Reading book was a more popular activity in spare time before, but television and such devices has been replaced them with in the modern world. People's opinions on television applications are different. I personally believe that both sides are true and we cannot confine its uses. In the following paragraphs, I will elaborate on my arguments.

First, one of the most important roles of television is informing its audiences. This role has different formations like news and documentaries. Some people are against the other functions of this medium. In fact, they believe that series or talk shows which are aired by television waste our time and programs informing people are the only acceptable use of television.

On the other hand, some individuals maintain that we should not take life serious as their opponents do. Happiness is an integral part of our life and television is one of the most suitable ways to satisfy this need. As a result, they are keen on series especially comedies, talk shows, and competitions. Moreover, since children do not have this opportunity to do physical activity at home, television programs play a pivotal role in entertaining them. However, child shows can teach them life skills through fun activities. For instance, Mr. Rogers, a popular host in the 80s and concerned about children, put a lot of efforts into talk to children about important subjects such as racism, divorce, and sympathy through fun songs and plays.

To conclude, I personally hold that people who care about all aspects of their life are healthier and more content. Happiness and knowledge are two different parts of our life which do not negate each other. Furthermore, I maintain if programmers try to produce scientific programs more amusing, these programs can hold a fascination for everybody, even people who are not interested in sciences and serious matters.
