The number of people leaving in the cities are increasing and as a result, citizens are ~~in-encountering~~ ~~countering~~ many issues. One of the major problems is ~~the~~ rising ~~the~~ crime rate. However, this could be solved by many effective methods.

One approach could be educating people from childhood. This period of time provides a good chance as children are starting to learn how to live in ~~the~~ society. Teaching students about the negative consequences of crime could ~~make-raise~~ responsible adults in future. This ~~Would~~ ~~would~~ create an alarm in their mind about ~~doing-engaging in~~ any crime or facing people doing so. However, I believe that not only does the idea of educating youngsters work, but also it could be beneficial for elder people.

Furthermore, it is a fact that many destructive behaviors occur due to poverty. For instance, the intention of doing burglary is mostly the lack of money. If we could build a society in which people ~~had-have~~ access to their basic needs, we might have seen a minimum number of crimes today. This is because many individuals who are not in severe poverty would prefer to avoid the risk of doing theft.

Another feasible approach is providing communities with more discipline. This could be addressed by a strict laws, higher fines and having numerous ~~policeman~~ ~~policemen~~ in the streets. It ~~cannot-not~~ be denied that many citizens obey the rules since they are afraid of the consequences of breaking them. Visible policemen in urban areas especially at night, ~~sends~~ the message that everyone is under supervision.

Although the number of crime is increasing in big cities, ~~however~~ this could be ~~lesson~~ ~~lessened~~ through different methods. This includes an organized program from childhood to adulthood and it is definitely the government's duty.
