Use specific reasons and example to support your answer .

I personally suppose that technology has made children less creative than they were in the past and I feel this is for a couple of reasons .

First of all , people are able to have quick access to technology , so they would rather use technology instead of researching from books or asking ~~from~~ other people or even thinking too much about some subjects they prefer to click one button and find their questions , thus this kind of fast availability slackens our brains because we get used to detecting fast the answers ~~of to~~ our questions . For example, if you have to write an essay ~~write on~~ an unfamiliar topic , you will search on the Internet quickly and for that reason we have lack of ideas in our writings .

Another important point is that ; technology has got many usages , takes imagination away from children though . It ~~does~~ does not let children ~~to~~ find diverse solutions for their problems that might be different from ~~another's~~ others' solutions . In addition, ~~with~~ by using technology they do not create new hobbies because they just play online games with PC or XBOX, so it is hazardous for their health especially their eyes . For instance , my cousins are always in front of TV and play online games and they do not hang out with their friends to play with them in parks or dead-end streets . Moreover , by utilizing technology the children's physical activities would diminish because everything would be ready ~~on turning a blind~~ in the blinking of an eye . They can order foods instead of going to restaurants or they can take carpooling instead of going out and taking a walk , using buses or the subway . This might cause weight gain/gaining weight in children .

Last in my view , although technology is beneficial , using it a lot can decrease children's ~~creativities~~ creativity or even can impact their health .
