

I personally accept that obtaining good results at school or university could bring some potential benefits but these successes do not necessarily lead to a successful life in the future.

First of all, it can be seen that a well- educated as well as well- qualified person who has been top student at university is unable to become handy in the workplace. Because they ~~can not~~cannot put their knowledge into action properly, and they do not know the way ~~how~~to use their information to open any doors in the company that they work in. Besides, it is still possible to do well in life without good qualifications.

Secondly, in some cases, achieving superb results at university leads to losing some chances. ~~B~~because top students spend a huge amount of their time studying, and they do not have enough time to socialize with people. In turn, they have less connections compared to ordinary people ~~as well as~~and makes them lose some of ~~the~~ chances in their lives. It is important to strike an appropriate work-life balance. Too much time spent working can harm people's social life and relationships. Consequently, sometimes, an individual is not capable of taking advantage of some opportunities in his/her life.

However, I'm unable to close my eyes to the privileges which top students, due to their knowledge, have in their lives. For instance, a person who has graduated from a reputable university and has multitude knowledge could gain entry into a well-known company and find a satisfactory or a well-paid occupation. Therefore, a good education could help a person to promote his/her life.

In a nutshell, although accomplishing superb outcomes at university can help a person in his/her life, it doesn't necessarily guarantee a successful life in the future.
