Nowadays, internet has a pivotal role in connecting people and getting informations. The merits and demerits of internet are widely discussed between people. Supporters argue using internet ease daily life, while skeptics argue on/about its unreliability.

Through the internet communication time and money are saved. Handling most of the work such as shopping, booking ticket or doing research, people who sitting in home and avoid paying money for transportation or wasting time in street. Families can have video connections with other members in other sides of world in the quickest and cheapest way by using internet.

In the same way, embark upon using internet led to improve educational sectors and ease researching. The availability of online course for students who have not enough time to attend in class because of distance or business, create many virtual educational sectors and opportunities of learning for people. Likewise, one advantage of obtainable information in internet, is that it can be expediency. Researchers can find many sources for their studies in internet as well as and they can present result of their articles in the internet.

Apart from the aforementioned, although the internet has made the universe a global village, we cannot avoid negative effect of using that's it. In other words, in the internet we can find informations that encompass-is unreliable, unhealthy or useless for societies. For instance fake news or dishonestly interpretations are very plenty in internet. as well as the internet causes to an increase in scientific theft/plagiarism.

In my opinion, despite a few bad effects of the internet, it is not inevitable in daily life and people should be learn how to deal with the negative effects of the internet in their life.
