

Some parents believe that their children should do educational activities during their free time. Others say that in this way children are under pressure.

Discuss both views and give your opinion.

In this modern world, whether children's leisure time should ~~accompany~~ accompanied by education has sparked much debate worldwide. Some people assert that activities alongside ~~with~~ educational elements might be suitable for children's lives, whereas many others argue that children need some spare time without any pressure of learning or thinking about education. Both sides are ascertained below.

Convincing arguments can be made that educational activities are of paramount significance which provides comprehensive benefits not only for children's learning, but also their future lives. To start with, when educational elements are made a part of leisure time activities, children learn effortlessly and with pleasure. To delve more into details, since parents know about their children's interests and hobbies, they can add educational values to their favorite activities and play and teach myriads of lessons. For instance, visiting an ancient palace in free time and learning the history of that place by listening to the pertinent told stories by parents.

Moreover, nowadays education has become a priority for many parents seeking to secure a better future for their children in this rapidly changing world. They believe that if their children apply themselves and work hard at school, then they will increase their opportunities for going to higher education and eventually getting an appropriate job. Hence, educational activities are liable to be intertwined with their future occupations and the level of their lives.

Admittedly, learning and studying constantly might bring harmful pressure on children or maybe cause some mental diseases such as depression. The reason that lies behind this issue is that children like playing and enjoying their spare time without a preoccupied mind naturally. For this reason, they need some time to unwind and be relaxed with full liberty. ~~However, since~~ Even so, children might waste countless hours of their leisure time for nothing but playing worthless and ~~jeopardize dangerous~~ games; ~~therefore, parents had better supervise their~~ /this matter can be managed by the supervision of parents and grown-ups.

In summary, I would concede that adding educational factors and values to activities can bring numerous merits in both children's education and their future professions. Although they need some free time, the supervision of parents is quite necessary to strike the balance between education and spare time in order ~~to~~for children not to become bored~~burdensome~~.