

Problems with environmental pollution have become so serious that many countries are trying to solve these problems.

Suggest possible solutions and give your own opinion.

It is true that, nowadays, we are dealing with the environmental pollution issue and its devastating effects on human beings in which climate change is a clear example. As a result, this essay will discuss this problem and put forward some possible solutions to tackle it individually and governmentally as well.

On the one hand, everyone has a great duty to protect mother nature. To begin with, parents and teachers should teach the next generation to respect the environment more than before and how they can preserve it. By instructing them in recycling and reducing their wastes, both teachers and parents could contribute a lot. In addition, people can reduce the use of fossil fuels burning by using public transports instead of their cars and walking or cycling to the workplace. Also donations to environmental communities and organizations could be another prescription for this problem.

On the other hand, as we suffer from large-scale natural depletion, authorities play a key role in solving this trouble. Initially, they should encourage people to contribute to keeping the environment clean by advertising to split up their wastes and open up new recycling facilities around cities. Moreover, making public transport more convenient and available could be a constructive approach. Plus, they can bring in some new policies about saving nature and impose heavy fines for offenders. For instance, when there was no fine for people, Tehran was more polluted than it is now.

To make a long story short, as far as wildlife pollution is concerned not only people but also governments should cooperate to address this issue.
