

Question:

Do you agree or disagree with following statement?

Successful people try new things and take risks rather than only doing what they already know how to do well.

Use specific reasons and examples to support your answer.

In our modern era a large number of people try to do their tasks successfully. Some of them have regular plans and others take risks. A question which is the matter of concern is whether encouraging doing innovations and taking risks are are better than doing previous work without any change? I am, to a great extent of the opinion that doing new work and putting yourself in peril are vital factors for striking successes.

To begin with, the world needs s new methods. Broadly speaking, no one can ignore the satisfaction offered by innovations .you see plenty of unimaginable tools tells that did not exist were not in previous centuries. To be more specific many inventors try to create new goods .these men did not know whether they would will succeed or will fail. ? Although some of them failed, others could develop science and help humanity. As an illustration Steve Jobs, jobs the founder of APPLE Corporation with design of "iPod and iPhone." could rescue/revive survive his company and could overcome financial problems, these innovations cause many people to enjoy their life.

Of equal importance is the fact that brave men imperil themselves. Although conditions are safe usually and in normal situations all people do their work fairly, the difference is in critical situations. Simply stated, a man is known by his work. Men who risk advisedly can succeed so they and their company will survive. themselves and their company. To be more specific in on crucial conditions many persons mistake and cannot overcome problems, only a few of them risk and can make correct decisions. However, what I stated cannot be over-generalized to all contexts, so if you risk without study and experience, you will fail in these positions.

To put it in a nutshell, from my point of view, people need innovations. To recapitulate the reasons, not only does they facilitate life, but also legie calculated risk is an important factor in to overcominge difficulties and your opponents.
