Happiness is considered very important in life.

Why is it difficult to define?

What factors are important in achieving happiness?

Although happiness is essential and indispensable for individuals, the interpretation of that somehow can be sophisticated and diverse. Simply, people take into account many factors such as wealth, academic or professional success for being happy though happiness might not be measured only by these factors.

First of all, there is incontrovertible ~~piece-of~~ evidence that happiness is ~~of~~ the most influential factor in each life. There is no incentive for human beings to push ahead with life, ~~if provided~~ there is no happiness in the world. Moreover, happiness and success are entwined with each other. No one can claim they will achieve success without happiness.

Secondly, the denotation of happiness depends on many facets such as your age, natal country, tradition, culture, creed and others. As a case in point, while some say having wealth and diversifying bank portfolios can bring them happiness, others claim academic or professional achievements might make them happy. But among these people that I desire to note, few believe that they can make themselves gratified gratify and feel happiness by helping others so that their ambitions and aspirations come to fruition.

Finally, it is worth knowing here that factors in achieving happiness can be listed in two groups. The first one is how well we try to be happy and how much we want to be happy. The second one that is more important and much more influential is how well we have been trained and brought up. For example, people in my country, due to ~~inasmuch as the~~ tradition and religious beliefs, ~~they~~ often tend to mourn for many enshrined events and places instead of having some festivities.

To sum up, from the author's perspective, living without happiness is a mirage and no one can do so. Also besides s our happiness we should consider others' happiness. And finally educating individuals in order to cast light on the way of achieving happiness is a priority approach.
