

successful sports professionals can earn a great deal more money than people in other important professions some people think this is fully justified while others think it is unfair discuss both these views and give your own opinion people who choose sports as their occupation and follow it as a professional player make much more money, since players have limited time in their work-life and they are more susceptible to injury during their professional-life, one camp thinks it is totally fair, in comparison to those people who have important jobs and have their huge responsibility in their occupation especially those whose work entails a lot of risk and its dangerous of their job, it is undeniable that they should be satisfied with their income. other people believe that this it is unfair. they earn less than professional players.

On the one hand, it can be said that professional players have a short period for their professional life, even if after that they select to be as a coach in their skill they cannot can not earn as highly as their stardom professional life and one important point is provided that they stay healthy they can continue their occupation, in other words they are faced with a lot of limitations within their work-life time.

On the other hand those people with important jobs have their ups and downs and many problems. to put it simply, they have their own difficulty in their field, for instance surgeons, who are well-educated and well-skilled persons, they need many qualifications in their work-life. Likewise, other jobs that save humans' human's life. as a result, it is the first thing that they should be pleased with their salary to sum up, from my point of my view, I think it is better if there is balance to remain balance to of incomes for of each job. I, myself, believe that each occupation has its difficulty.
