

In many countries children are engaged in some kind of paid work. Some people regard this as completely wrong, while others consider it as valuable work experience, important for learning and taking responsibility.

What are your opinions on this?

In the history of mankind, possibly no century has witnessed a bigger concern about children than does the 21st century does. However, people in harsh economic climates s are increasingly interested in their child to contribute them to the family income. r it is hard to judge whether paidpay-work for a child is wrong or valuable.

In recent years, owing to economic troubles after the global recession, many children repetitively do arduous tasks, such as hard work in a factory production line instead of more appropriate jobs like home services for elderlies. Undoubtedly, the paramount issue is the nature of the job for children. However, there is a growing recognition to use services of children simply to save more money by paying them less than adults s among employees. Therefore, this is an exploitation that it should be discouraged.

One might argue that r, roughly engaging with hard work circumstances s is an educational situation for children. This view point is flawed. If learning responsibility and work experience experiment are considered to be crucial, children can acquire these by having light part- time jobs s like helping parents in household chores s. Thereby, they can enjoy their non-compulsory activities and didactically learn tasks for their own future simultaneously.

As shown above, to use children for full-time pay work owing to more benefits by employer is an indicator of child-abuse because not only is-are children suffering, but also hard works does not contribute any valuable experiences to children. In addition, r during better economic circumstances s/conditions children can do light tasks s to become competent citizens s in future. Therefore, I morally believe that adults s must drastically defend their children against rough circumstances s such as full-time paidpay- work.