

Levels of youth crime are increasing rapidly in most cities around the world.

What are the reasons for this, and suggest some solutions.

In this day and age, the rise in rising the number of uncontrolled youngsters who commit multitudes of crimes has become a crisis, by and large, all over the world. Many sociologists argue this social disorder has a direct correlation with both family and community condition. Furthermore, not only should we investigate the causes of this problem, but also find some practical solutions.

To begin with, adolescents are more prone to disobey the family's rules due to their psychological and physiologic situation. Having said that, if parents cannot display suitable reaction to children's violence or cannot manage their behavior correctly, they may deviate from the right way and find other another means for releasing their energy out of the house which in turn can be conducive to dire consequences. In addition, availability of inappropriate entertainments for young people, like variety of drugs and drinks is another motivator to the happening of these types of behaviors. For instance, a host of reports regarding youth crimes are related to neighborhoods which comprise lower-class families with illiterate parents as well as numerous criminal gangs.

Solving these this serious problems, many administrations and authority figures have encouraged d the media to broadcast educational programs about the correct means of raising children and preventing them from inappropriate friends through providing them with a reliable and trustworthy atmosphere in home and in family members' relationships. Another point that should be made here is stricter controls that families and governments s have to place on deleterious activities/things for the young proportion of the populace, like movies and music which demonstrate criminal activities as attractions of life.

In a nutshell, although the main culprit behind this problem is unsuitable circumstances and behavior of the family and society as a whole, they might be the only tools to reform the community and dissuade ing young people from going to hazardous ways as well.
