

Industrialization and effects on socialization

Industrialization undoubtedly has had positive and negative impacts on any aspect of the human routine life during past century. Making irregular growth in big cities' population and boundaries as well as consequent problems are found as the most significant effects caused by that. ~~B~~but after this growth just the trend of the modern life style started.

With the end of ~~Finishing~~ the second world war which contributed to a the vast destruction in several countries which and starting triggered the industrial revolution, variation in style of life was initiated. Although the majority of industrial revolution-related changes were was because of repairing and enhancing the military power of war - involved countries, some political, economical and social results occurred after that. One of the most noticeable consequences after the mentioned changes was moving the work applicants from the destroyed cities to the big cities to find the better opportunities.

Housing ,education, social care, marriage, insurance, retirement and other issues etc have gotten crucially important arguments which emerged after the immigration to industrial big cities and both governments and clients had to deal with them. These issues not only led to establishing prove the laws as to that how the mentioned necessary requirements must be fulfilled, but also made the sense of considering the vital needs for newly made communities in big cities. Those needs became the essential requirements for all different groups of people living or working in society.

In addition, moral ,cultural ,traditional and religious differences between the people gathered together in the same city caused social disagreements especially in the style of life and respecting each other. Therefore, these subjects contributed to adjusting the social laws by the justice departments to define the red lines in the society and show how significant the respecting others lives and rights is. Human rights and civil laws were the results of these attempts which are still being used as the basis of justice.

Overall, industrialization as one the most outstanding events in the recent centuries made plenty of changes and useful results eonsequeenes in human life regardless of some troubleshoots ????????? made too. Most of the newly seen productions, habits, laws, facilities and inventions around us are originated from the industrialization which made socialization in the societies. So Therefore, we ean not cannot imagine how our life can be without these ever used facilities.

Ali Asadi