

Trees are essential for the existence of the human race as they provide the oxygen we need to survive, yet .yet, daily all around the globe large areas of woodland are being destroyed. many people feel that they as individuals can do nothing and that only government and large companies can halt the destruction.

Today with rapid technological developments and also so-as urban expansion, the nature and habitat of all the creatures unfortunateley have been invaded by us, as the sprawaling development of cities which has led leads to more and more bare free land getting created to built on it. in other words, we are killing ourselves by eradicating the woodlands and the trees. so consequently, there will be no oxygen for the next generation to breathe.

As i saidas mentioned earlier, human selfishness and his willingness to rule all over the world has led leads to eradicating the woodlands and jungles as we can even see around us, so .so-who is in charge?!? although the impact of government policies and its effects affect cannot can-not be denied, but we are individually have our own responsibilities to the Mmother Eearth.

It is obvious that if we want to point our finger tofor the first cause blameworthy we precipitously mention the government and its policies or companies. however, the administration hashave direct control and eaffect on the environment but the government consists of whom and where is our role?!? I think this is so irresponsible cowardice to say that we ourselves can do nothing and all the liability returns reflects to the governments, so instead of evading disclaimer of our tasks we can have ourare own duties towards against the nature .

Its It is therefore clear that not only the that government and companies have their own liabilities to keep the nature and woodlands alive but also we individually have to take care of it and it is extremely/so selfishness if we want to relieve ourselves ofput ourselves behind this responsibility.
